

Followings are the correspondence between Mr. Kaminski and Mr. Tsuji after the meeting on May 14

Dear Mr. Tsuji,

Thank you very much for your courtesy and the inspiring study session. I am grateful for the opportunity to be introduced to the Smile-kai community by Prof. Wasilewski. I also apologize for my inadequate knowledge of Japanese.

I was truly touched by the Reverend's lecture: He has interwoven a genuine wisdom of his own life experiences of war and discrimination with the much broader intercultural and philosophic issues of Slavery and Final Judgment.

As I mentioned during our follow up discussion, the Burakumin issue is not exclusively a Japanese phenomena: I had encountered a structurally similar discrimination of domestic social groups during my field research in Central Europe, Scandinavia and other regions. The Reverend's cross-culturally rich life experiences in Taiwan, Japan and Brazil proved that our inner conflicts can be channeled into a socially positive force and passed over to the next generations. K. Matsushita's PHP legacy is an other example of transforming one's life wisdom to a practical tool for the long-term social changes.

As you had noted our time for discussion was limited. There are many question we might have asked ourselves: Is War and Discrimination going to be as an integral part of our children and grandchildren's future as it was a part of our parents and grandparents' lives? Are the new generations of multi-cultural Europeans going to be better prepared to cope with ethnic and social discrimination in the larger EU? Will the Korean Unification inspire grassroots mobilization and generate an Asian Unity movement across cultural political boundaries? Could such a movement bring a South East Asian Union(SEAU) and secure better conditions for the Eurasian peace and prosperity?

Thank you again for the thought provoking evening. I appreciate your kind invitation and hope to contribute to the SMILE-kai's sessions in the future.

Best regards to you and your colleagues,

Marek

Dear Mr.Kaminski,

I thank you very much for your mail, and I was very glad to hear you enjoyed our meeting although we could not do enough effort to make you understand the Reverend's report fully.

I read your letter and I thought your comments are to be appreciated by the visitors to our homepage as well as our absent members.

If you do not mind allow me to introduce your comment as follows.

(including the sensitive part of " K. Matsushita's PHP legacy is an other example of transforming one's life wisdom to a practical tool for the long term social changes.")

Did you visit our homepage? ... <http://www.smile-kai.com/>

Mr. Horio finished to renew it already adding yesterday's meeting.

Best regards,

Hiroshi Tsuji

Dear Mr. Tsuji,

Please feel free to incorporate my comments on the Reverend's lecture to your SMILE-kai's homepage.

I visited your homepage yesterday and was astonished to find my photo as well. I have also learned more about the SMILE-kai's distinguished membership and the past lecture series.

Best regards

Marek
